What is casing design?

Casing design involves the determination of factors which influence the failure of casing and the selection of the most suitable casing grades and weights for a specific operation, both safely and economically. The casing programme should also reflect the completion and production requirements.

What is a casing design calculator?

This calculator provides basic casing design calculations, including burst and collapse pressure checks. It's a simplified model and should not be used for final design without consulting relevant standards and performing more detailed analysis. Casing Design Overview: This calculator provides a simplified approach to casing design.

What is a casing design criteria?

It also covers casing design criteria like classifications based on outside diameter, length, connections, weight, and grade. The mechanical properties of casing are discussed in relation to withstanding tensile, burst, and collapse loads during drilling and production operations. - Download as a PDF or view online for free
