

What are the space requirements for casing?

In determining space requirements for casing, the following points are to be considered: working space. In accordance with API Recommended Practice RP 5C1 (Section 3), the height of the stack should not exceed 10 ft (3 m) including the pipe rack.

How do you store and transport tubing & casing couplings?

When storing and transporting tubing and casing couplings, it's important to establish a systematic storage strategy. This helps ensure that the parts are easy to locate when needed, and also reduces the risk of them being damaged in transport or mishandled during use. One key element of an effective storage system is labeling each part correctly.

Can a tubular casing be re-coated before storage?

If casing is to remain in storage for a long period, the mill coating could be supplemented or the casing completely cleaned from the mill coat and re-coated. The internal and external surfaces of production tubulars may be grit blasted and then re-coated prior to storage.

How do I organize my tubing & casing couplings?

Organizing your tubing and casing couplings correctly will help during transport as well. Putting them into labeled containers not only makes loading easier but also ensures that nothing gets lost along the way. If possible, try to group similar items together for even more convenience during transit.
